The memory cell is the fundamental building block of computer memory. The memory cell is an electronic circuit that stores one bit of binary information and it must be set to store a logic 1 (high voltage level) and reset to store a logic 0 (low voltage level). Its value is maintained/stored until it is changed by the set/reset process.

Flash memory is an electronic (solid-state) non-volatile computer storage medium that can be electrically erased and reprogrammed.. Toshiba developed flash memory from EEPROM (electrically erasable programmable read-only memory) in the early 1980s and introduced it to the market in 1984. [citation needed] The two main types of flash memory are named after the NAND and NOR logic gates.

The volatile keyword. Another (more advanced) way to solve this problem is to apply the volatile keyword to the _complete field: volatile bool _complete; . The volatile keyword instructs the compiler to generate an acquire-fence on every read from that field, and a release-fence on every write to that field. An acquire-fence prevents other reads/writes from being moved before the fence; a ...
